MEMORIAL WALK: GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE

On February 14th, 2023, a memorial walk around McMaster campus was organized to recognize and remember those who have been victims of gender-based violence and how it has directly impacted the McMaster community. There was also an emphasis on recognizing the missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls (MMIWG) and how Indigenous individuals are disproportionately affected by gender-based violence.

December 6th is known as the National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence Against Women in Canada because of the Montreal Massacre that happened on this date in 1989. Due to unforeseen circumstances, the walk was not able to be run on that date, so February 14th was picked since it is often also a date used to remember victims of gender-based violence and the importance of fostering safe environments.
